Working with lost animals is one of the most challenging cases. Please know there is no guarantee through the consultation and through the information received that the animal will be found. Unfortunately, there are too many elements that are not under our control. Best efforts to determine if animal is alive or has passed, where the animal is physically. When animals are lost, they become feral. They will move and usually will not stay in one place. I am able to receive "snap shots" of what they have seen or encountered. After I have received all the information the animal is willing to share, the next step is for you to do your best to locate your animal based on the information I have provided to you. If you have not been able to locate your animal companion within a few days or weeks and you would like updated information we can set up another consultation.
